Inverness Prison - Multnomah County Corrections- Sgt Shawn Skeels	(503) 988 - 5039		(503) 969-8025	shawn.skeels@mco.gov				Can be volunteer or contracted - call for a quote
	Sgt. Skeels oversees 14 crews of eight inmates each, who do everything from laundry to landscaping, litter removal to illegal dumpsite clean up, painting to carpentry. The inmates perform both contracted fee for service work and free community service. The work performed is usually work that wouldn't otherwise get done due to tight budgets or because it is work no one else wants to do.
Community Groups
								Approximate Costs
Hands on Greater Portland - volunteer clearing house which helps groups identify and recruit volunteers- www.handsonportland.org								staff time to list
Schools - high school, middle school and elementary school students can be involved in invasive plant removal, planting of natives, doing trail maintenance and other natural area restoration tasks. Teachers are often eager to get their students outside and learning about the environment in a hands-on atmosphere. Many schools now mandate students to complete community service hours each month. Works best with an educator leading groups.								staff time to supervise
Scouts - troops have volunteerism and environmental requirements they need to fulfill and many times, coming to a planting event is a great field trip for them. Eagle Scout applicants are often looking for larger projects. A signed stewardship agreement can improve communication with Eagle Scouts.								staff time to supervise
"Environmental" Clubs - Portland has a number of clubs and organizations you can contact to see if they are interested in helping out with events. Local colleges and universities are a good place to start.								staff time to supervise
"Friends" Groups - Although an obvious connection to a natural area they also have ties to neighborhood associations and residents who live close to locations								staff time to nurture relationship
List-Serves - advertising on some of Portland's list-serves is a great way to get information about your event out to the public in addition to local newspapers. Many list events a few months in advance.								staff time to list
